The Brief

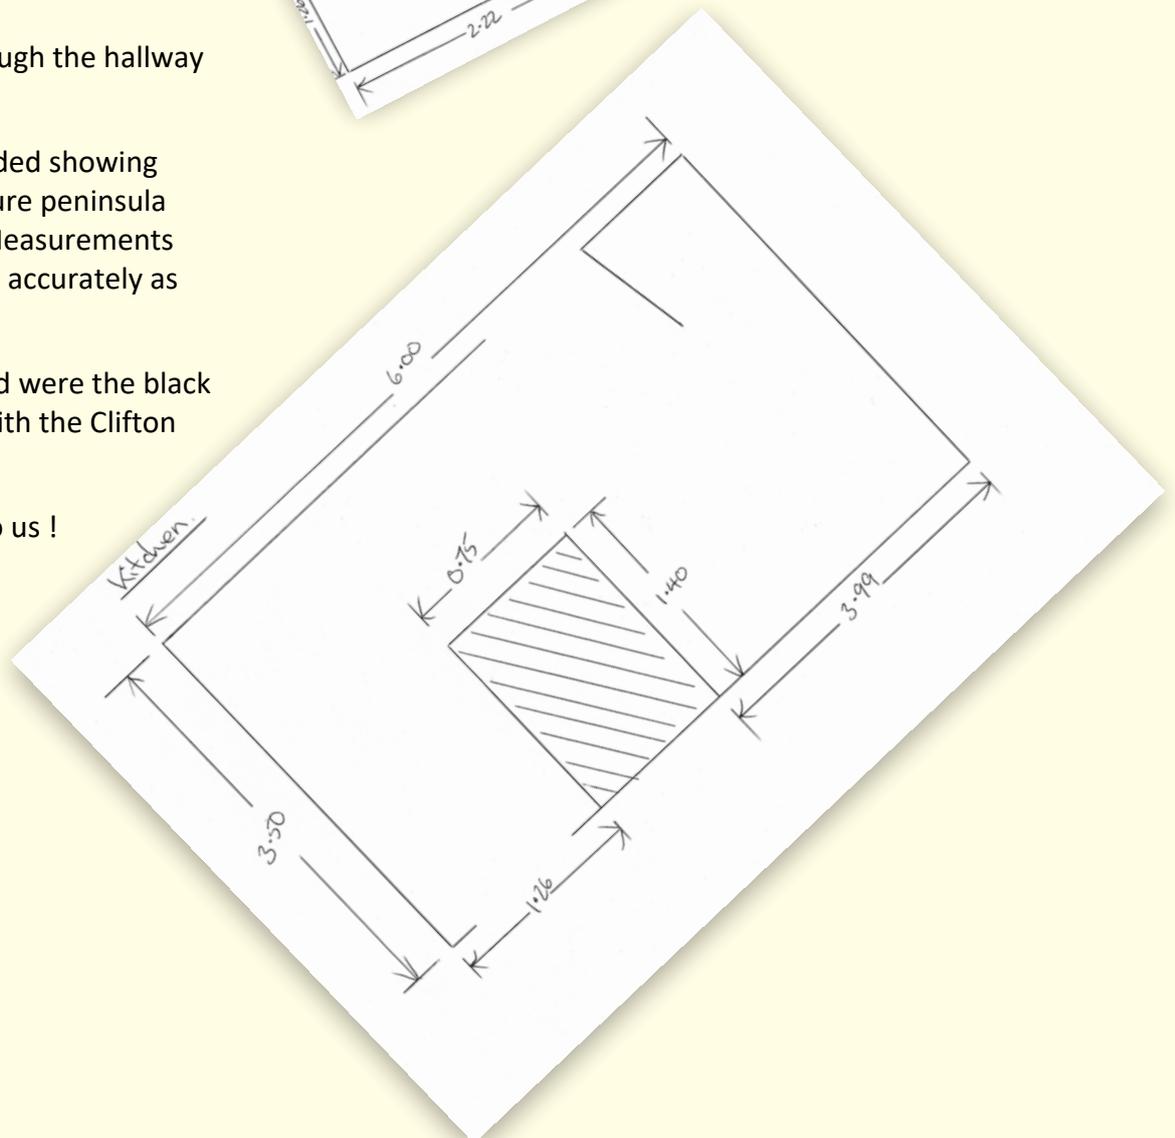

The brief from the client for this domestic project was to unify the look of the lower floor of their period home.

From the porch, through the hallway and into the kitchen.

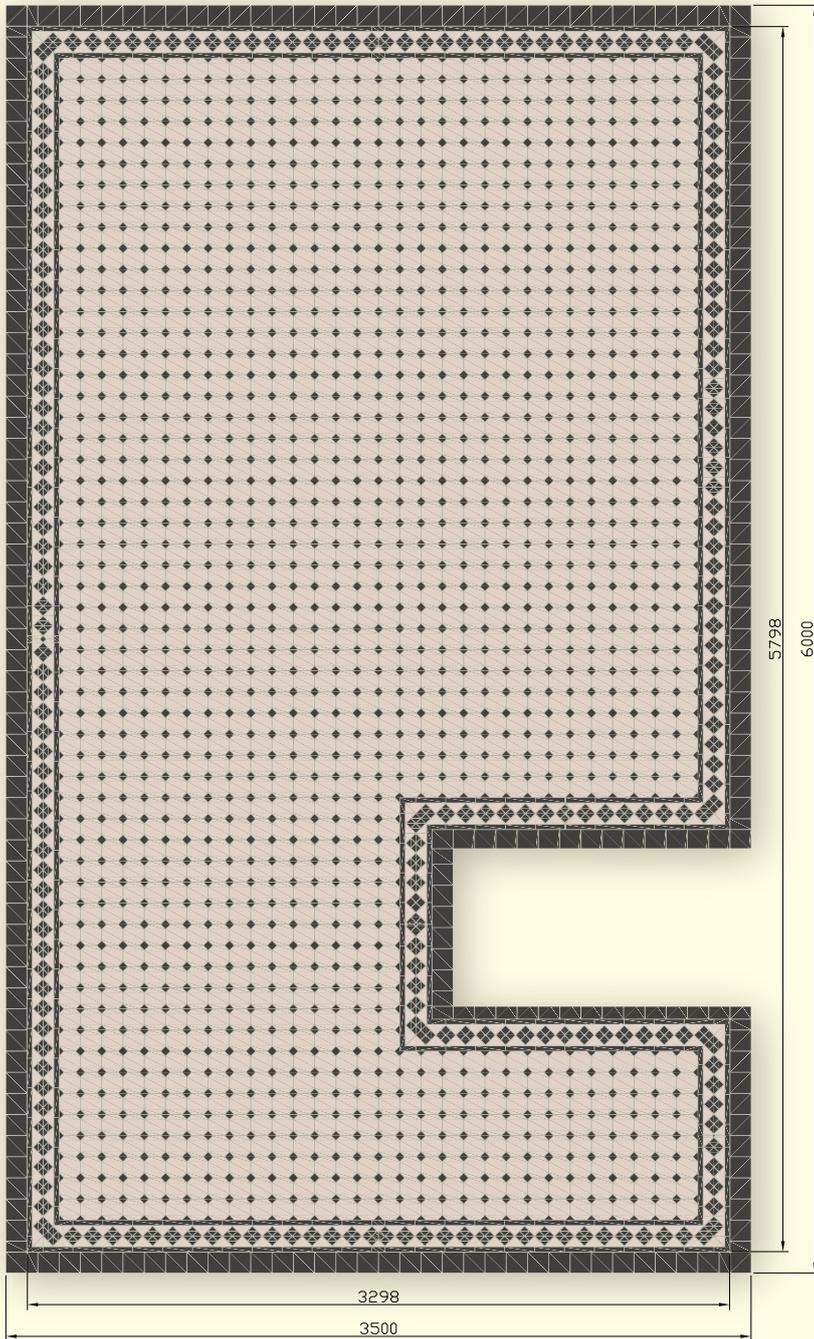

Drawings were provided showing doorways and a feature peninsula unit in the kitchen. Measurements were taken on site as accurately as possible.

The products selected were the black and white octagon with the Clifton borders and corners.

The rest was down to us !

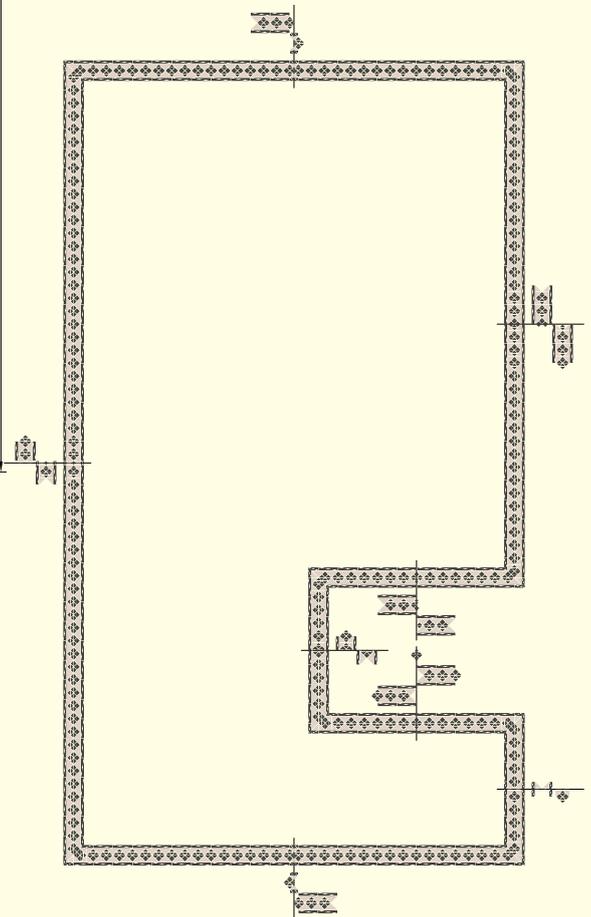

The Kitchen

The client was adamant that the border should follow the outline of the room including the feature peninsula unit.

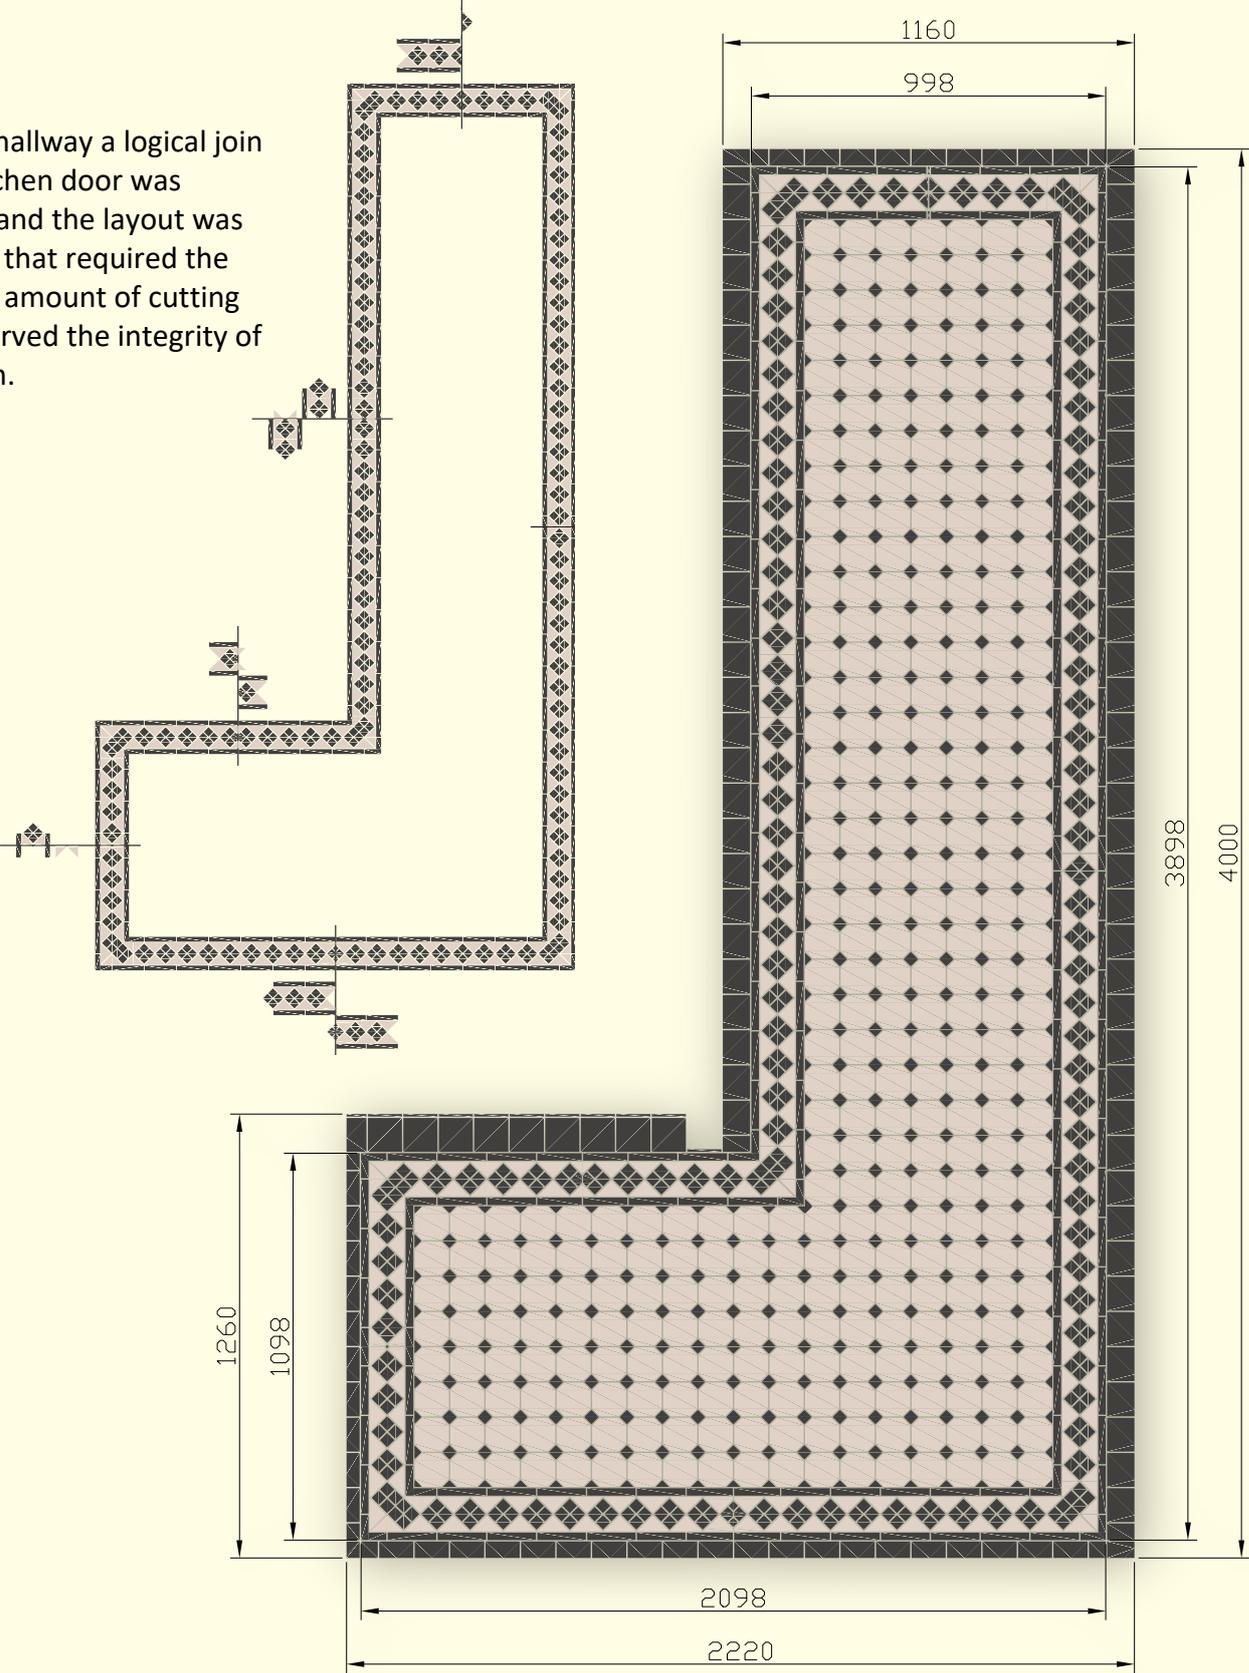

Design software was used to set out the border and indicate the cutting points, and then fill in with the octagonal pattern.

A program of parts was produced that ensured that the floor could be completed successfully with the minimum of waste.

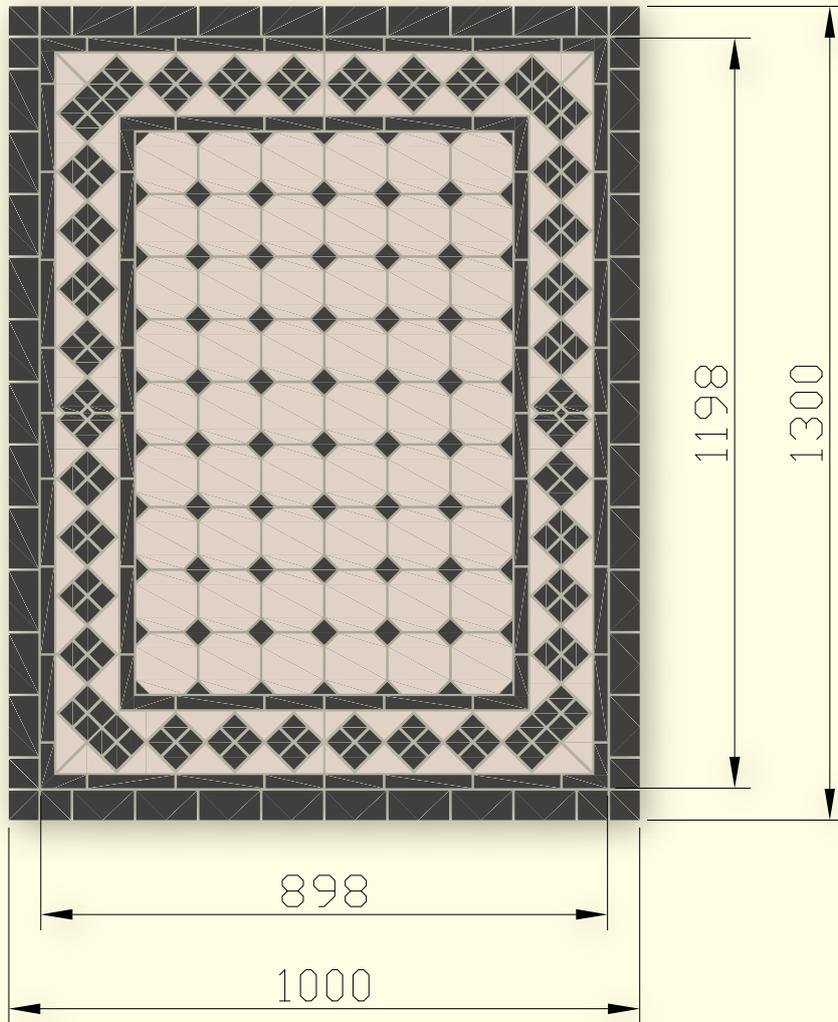

The Hallway

With the hallway a logical join to the kitchen door was specified and the layout was produced that required the minimum amount of cutting and preserved the integrity of the design.

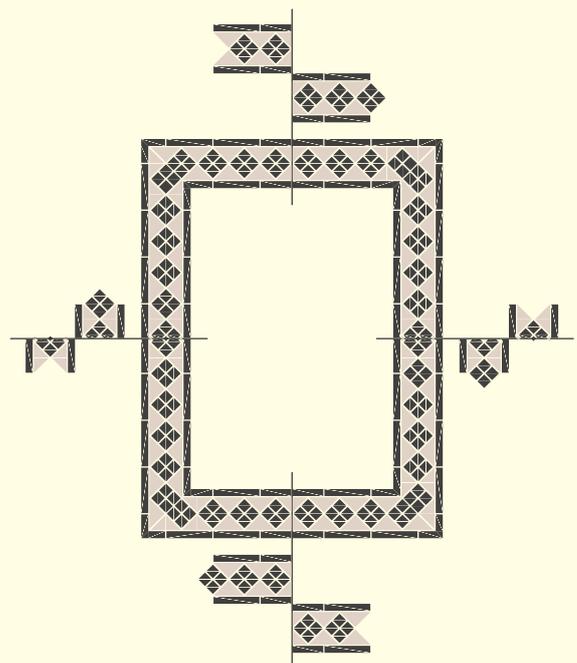

The Porch

And finally the porch area was designed, the simplest area but in many ways the most crucial. First impressions are important.

Once the designs were signed off, all the required pieces were supplied ready mesh mounted for ease of installation.

TECHNICAL INFORMATION

All Victorian Collection products are produced in a ISO 9001 and ISO 14001 certified European factory.

All products comfortably meet the highest standards for quality and durability, including frost resistance, impact resistance and resistance to staining.

All Victorian Collection products meet the stringent DIN51097 anti slip criteria for wet areas to class "B", the DIN51130 anti slip criteria for dry areas to "R10". They also score well on the Ceram UK pendulum test scales of 60 in the dry and 37 in the wet.
